

United States Senate

November 1, 2021

Mr. Matthew Shay
National Retail Federation
President and Chief Executive Officer
1101 New York Avenue, NW
Suite 1200
Washington, DC 20005

Dear Mr. Shay:

I'd first like to thank you for your incredible work throughout this pandemic. America's truck drivers are like the offensive linemen of America's supply chain - often overlooked but absolutely essential to get things moving. My adopted father was a truck driver. Anyone who has driven trucks or been close to someone in that line of work knows how demanding the job can be. It's hard work and it's one of the most critical jobs in our country. As I'm sure you know, America has been battling a truck driver shortage for quite some time and we can't afford to lose any more.

Restoring our supply chains is critical to getting the American economy rolling again, and something President Biden doesn't seem to understand. In a weak economy where simply keeping shelves stocked is an everyday challenge, losing workers in almost any critical industry will have catastrophic impacts across our supply chains and drive prices higher. But, for the last nine months, instead of creating a friendly business environment to ensure a strong rebound from the COVID-19 pandemic, President Biden has added burdensome regulations that have only stifled business growth. These failed policies, coupled with lingering employment issues due to the Democrats' failed policies of paying people more to stay at home than go back to work, have energy prices surging and inflation raging.

I've been hearing from businesses and families across Florida who are seeing the effects of President Biden's inflation crisis firsthand. Seafood restaurants in Miami are seeing price increases of 50-60% on fish. Furniture stores in Florida are seeing wait times of six to eight months before they can deliver certain products. And Florida grocery stores are warning of product shortages as customers are starting to see empty shelves. Small business owners and families aren't able to afford those kinds of drastic increases and delays, but if President Biden has his way those transportation difficulties are going to become even worse and prices will rise even higher.

Mr. Matthew Shay
November 1, 2021
Page Two

As a United States Senator and a member of the Senate Commerce, Science, and Transportation Committee, as well as the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee, I am deeply concerned with the total lack of awareness for the harmful policies, mandates and rhetoric under the guise of “Build Back Better” coming from the Biden administration. As a prominent group that represents American workers, I would like your input on the following:

- What federal regulations has this administration put in place that are most hindering your industry’s ability to function at full capability?
  - What can we do in Congress to help alleviate these problems?
- How have rising energy prices and rising inflation impacted your industry?
- How have increased federal unemployment insurance and generous new federal benefits for able-bodied adults, which have encouraged more people to remain out of the workforce, affected your industry’s ability to hire?

I look forward to your responses as we work together to address these supply chain shortages caused by President Biden and his administration’s failed policies and find real solutions to help the American people. I’ll do everything I can to ensure your members have every opportunity to succeed and live the American dream.

Sincerely,

Rick Scott
United States Senator

cc: Scott Shalley, President and Chief Executive Officer, Florida Retail Federation